PROJECT EXPERIENCE

Postdoctoral Research Fellow
Center for Human-Engaged Computing
Kochi University of Technology, Japan
Sep '15 - present

- User Interface Design for the Ageing Population: This project aims to design novel user interfaces for smartphones that suit to elderly peoples movement capabilities and cognitive functioning. The specific goal is to create scientific foundations for designing user interfaces for smartphones that better suit the capabilities of older adults. We develop mathematical models of user performance that predict improvements in user interface throughput and functionality. The outcomes are interface designs that improve usability, usefulness, and help older adults avoid expensive and socially stigmatizing specialized devices. We conducted both short-term and longitudinal experiments to validate the developed ability-based interfaces with older adults having cognition and motor impairment.
